

Teaching Tolerance Seeks Writer/Associate Editor

Teaching Tolerance, an award-winning anti-bias education project, seeks a writer/associate editor to strengthen its editorial team.

Teaching Tolerance magazine reaches over 400,000 educators all across America. Our website has close to one million visitors annually. Our curriculum kits are in use in tens of thousands of schools.

A project of the Southern Poverty Law Center (which is known internationally for its legal actions against hate groups), Teaching Tolerance is a leading voice for social justice and multiculturalism in K-12 education. Teaching Tolerance creates real social change by telling the stories of educators who make a difference and by showing other teachers how they did it.

We seek writers who know how to tell a story and who have a passion for making schools a more just place for everyone. Our ideal candidate would be an experienced journalist with editing experience, a background in educational publishing and an interest in equity issues.

Our teaching materials have won two Oscars, an Emmy and more than 20 honors from the Association of Educational Publishers, including two Golden Lamp Awards, the industry's highest honor.

The Southern Poverty Law Center is an equal opportunity employer. We welcome applications from people of color, lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgendered people, people with disabilities and women. The Center does not discriminate on the basis of gender, disability, age, marital status, status with regard to public assistance, religion, national origin, sexual orientation, race or ethnicity. Relocation to Montgomery, Ala., is required.

Send cover letter, resume, editorial references and no more than five clips to: Human Resources, Southern Poverty Law Center, 400 Washington Ave., Montgomery, AL 36104. Electronic applications may be sent to humanresources@splcenter.org No phone calls, please.